

The Kelley School of Business at Indiana University in Bloomington seeks applications for full-time, non-tenure-track lecturer positions in the Department of Business Law and Ethics, effective Fall 2025. The candidate(s) selected will join a well-established department of 27 full-time faculty members who teach a variety of residential and online courses on legal topics, business ethics, and critical thinking at the undergraduate and graduate levels. Lecturers have teaching and service responsibilities but are not expected to engage in research activities.

To be qualified, a US-based JD is preferred; however, individuals licensed to practice law in the United States will be considered. A candidate also must demonstrate the potential to be an outstanding teacher, provide meaningful service, and contribute positively to a multicultural campus. We welcome applicants interested in teaching a diverse range of classes in the areas of business law and business ethics, broadly defined. Particular consideration will be given to applicants with teaching interests and/or experience in corporate law, employment law, compliance and/or business ethics.

Interested candidates should review the application requirements and submit their application at <https://indiana.peopleadmin.com/postings/25958>. Candidates may direct questions to Professor Angie Raymond, Department Chair (angraymo@iu.edu).

Application materials received by November 1, 2024, will be assured of consideration. However, the search will continue until the position(s) is/are filled.

Indiana University is an equal employment and affirmative action employer and a provider of ADA services. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment based on individual qualifications. Indiana University prohibits discrimination based on age, ethnicity, color, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, genetic information, marital status, national origin, disability status or protected veteran status.