

The Department of Ethnic Studies (ES) and the Public Administration Program (PUBA), College of Social Sciences, University of Hawai'i at Manoa (Honolulu, Hawai'i) invites applicants for a joint position between ES (75% FTE) and PUBA (25% FTE) at the Assistant Professor (F-3) level with the locus of tenure in ES. This is a permanent, tenure track, full-time, 9-month, faculty appointment to begin August 1, 2025, subject to position clearance and availability of funds.

Grounded in Hawaiian values, we seek an applicant who specializes in Justice, Equity, Diversity, Accessibility, and Inclusion (JEDAI). The Department and the Program welcomes applications from innovative scholars with training in social and political movements who apply interdisciplinary, intersectional, and/or de/anticolonial methods to their research, teaching, and mentorship.

This joint position responds to the needs of Hawai'i in preparing our students to address diversity, equity, and inclusion for institutional change and builds upon our strong outreach and engagement with the community and non-profit leadership. It will also contribute to our emerging Creative Audio and Visual Ethnic Studies (CAVES) initiative that trains students in activism and digital literacy needed to effectively promote social justice. The growth of Oceanic Ethnic Studies represents an investment on the part of UHM to fulfill its kuleana (responsibilities and commitments) to becoming a Native Hawaiian place of learning while also being at the vanguard of educating our multiethnic students about their roots and the historic and ongoing struggles for racial justice in Hawai'i and across the world. We are seeking a candidate whose research and teaching engage Native Hawaiians and/or other Pacific Islanders.
